Farmingville, NY - On July 2, Town Building Department Inspectors and Law Department Investigators visited a house at 150 Christian Avenue in Stony Brook and discovered numerous signs hanging on the walls that appeared to have been stolen from neighborhood roadways, the Stony Brook Railroad Station, and community businesses. The property was seized by Law Department Investigators and a criminal complaint was filed with the Suffolk County Police Department. Pictured left to right are Superintendent of Highways Dan Losquadro, Deputy Town Attorney David Moran, Supervisor Ed Romaine and Law Department Investigator Brian Tohill.

The house, which has been a source of ongoing community complaints and Town of Brookhaven enforcement actions, has been known to be the off-campus residence for members of the Alpha Epsilon Pi (AEPi) fraternity from Stony Brook University. It was brought to the Town's attention that the fraternity's president was removed and their charter at Stony Brook University suspended in November of 2012.
